5. Architectural Significance (Note interesting interior and exterior details, etc., cite significant alterations and additions)

Probably built in the third quarter of the 19th century, the Brock Farm Smokehouse is interesting for the singular feature of a jettied steeple with louvered vents and pyramidal type roof. The smokehouse, other than the steeple, is quite plain being a simple frame structure with gable roof and salt box addition and being covered with plain unbeaded siding. The function of the steeple was that of a housing for a large dinner bell which is still in place and functional.
